WHO?

The Castro Alves family history began in the 19th century in the Araxá region, in Minas Gerais. In its seventh generation, it mixes faith and mystery. Founded in 1950, Fazenda Barinas is one of the pioneers in the coffee production of the region, today under the command of Tiago C. Alves. Nowadays the family is considered a model in the coffee specialty production, a reference in sustainability, and is highly known for their professionalism that culminates in the excellence of the coffees they produce.

WHERE?

Situated in a region blessed with a diverse ecosystem, Fazenda Barinas benefits from a unique microclimate characterized by crisp winds from the Cuchumatanes mountains and warm gusts from the Tehuantepec region. The farm's altitude, ranging from 900 to 1,400 meters, coupled with rich volcanic soil, creates an ideal environment for coffee cultivation.

The name Barinas means “where the wind blows the strongest,” and was given in honor of the Araxas Indians, who lived in that region.
